Ethics of Climate Change
Guest Speaker: Matthew Goodwin

Join us for a stimulating discussion with Matthew Goodwin on the ethical challenges associated with climate change and global warming.

Global warming presents humanity with one of the most difficult ethical challenges ever faced. More than just a scientific problem, this is a collective action problem requiring that we work together to find appropriate strategies for adaptation. It requires recognizing attribution of cause and effect, and careful consideration of the likely outcomes of harm to others. Future generations will have their quality of life impacted through the loss of species habitat and with it many of the creatures that have inspired us for millennia. In this presentation and discussion, we will pursue these and other philosophical and ethical questions that confront us today with human caused global warming.

Matthew Goodwin

Matthew Goodwin is a founder at Sedona Philosophy and a senior lecturer in the philosophy department at Northern Arizona University, where he specializes in phenomenology, environmental ethics, and philosophy of art. He has presented on areas of significance in northern Arizona, including the Grand Canyon and James Turrell's Roden Crater. He is active with Arizona Humanities AZ Sansaika program, and has worked with the Sedona International Film Festival and the Museum of Northern Arizona to highlight the philosophical significance of issues in art, film, and the Colorado Plateau.

The program is free, open to the public and is co-sponsored by League of Women Voters Greater Verde Valley, OLLI at Yavapai College – Sedona/Verde Valley, and Keep Sedona Beautiful.

Historian Archivist Needed

KSB is fast approaching its 50th year of service to the greater Sedona area. In 2021 we will celebrate our golden anniversary. In order to organize and eventually share our incredible story through the decades, we are looking for a volunteer to review our history books and recommend significant events that are best to publicize. The plan is to submit short articles to the media each month in 2021, arranged in chronological order. You would have guidance and assistance from the KSB office staff and from various Trustees, including the KSB President.

The approximate start time for this effort will be mid-2019. Work could be accomplished principally at home. If you're interested in this opportunity, please contact Jan Wind at 928-282-4938 or email us at ksb@keepsedonabeautiful.org to arrange for an in-depth discussion of this initiative.
